ROOMS WITH HEART AND SOUL

There are children's rooms, and then there are children's rooms with heart and soul.

We would like to inspire you to look at the children's room as we do: As a universe of imagination and possibilities which in every way is designed to protect the most important thing of all: Our children.

As a father of three wonderful kids, I only want the best for my children and I know how different children can be. The children's room is more than just a bedroom, it is a playroom and a living room as well. Children spend more time there than in any other room in the house, which is why it naturally has to be healthy and safe. As the only producer in the world, our modular beds carry the Nordic Ecolabel. We have chosen the Nordic Ecolabel because it coincides with our own values of contributing to a more sustainable and healthy world; a world where children can grow up safely and securely.

Other than plenty of sustainable quality furniture, the magalogue contains guides on how you can get a healthier children's room, how to choose the right bed, how to furnish different types of children's rooms and a lot, lot more. It is our hope that you will find the magalogue both intriguing and inspiring.

The IDA Playpen with round bars. The base can be set to three different heights. Outer measurements: W91xH71xD85 cm

THE PLAYPEN - AN OASIS OF PEACE

The playpen is neither a cage nor a prison for your child. From your child's point of view, it is rather a bubble that protects your child from everyone else. The playpen is a safe haven for your child where disruptions, curious pets and siblings are kept out. It is also a safe and secure spot for your child if you need to do something that requires you to turn your back to the child for a bit.

A pen for learning and playing

The bars of the playpen are the ideal support for when your child is starting to stand and walk – both from the inside and outside of the playpen. By using a nonslip underlay, e.g. a playpen mattress, which also serves as isolation you will create a soft, comfortable and safe surface for your child.

While your child is still very small, you can tie a cord across the playpen and attach toys to it. This is a useful tool to stimulate and train your child's eye-hand coordination, because the child will begin to reach for the toys when they are 2-3-months old. For safety reasons you should remove the cord as soon as your child starts to attempt to stand up.

Use the playpen as a supplement

It is important to use the playpen with care because your child will train useful skills, such as crawling and rolling, when placed on the floor. As soon as your child begins to move about on his or her own, you should only use the playpen for shorter stays and for the child's own safety e.g. when you have to leave the room.

If you are worried a playpen will take up too much space in your home, you can consider buying one with a smaller size. The playpen from Hoppekids only measures 91x85 cm and has a mattress size of 80x86 cm. The base is adjustable to three different heights. Use these settings to avoid hurting your back when you are lifting your child as well as protect your child from draft.

ANTON Baby bed | CHRISTLAN dresser

This means that there are strict standards regarding environment, health, quality and safety which ensures safe surroundings for your child. The design on ANTON enables you to rebuild the crib into a bed and thereby increase ANTON's useful life remarkably. Should a baby sister or brother arrive? Then you can easily transform ANTON back to a crib!

THE CRADLE – MORE THAN A BED

The cradle is your baby's first real sleeping place after being carried around in a belly for nine months. Therefore, it is essential that the sleeping place is a safe and secure place where your baby can adjust to being outside in the real world.

Why choose the cradle?

There are plenty of advantages in choosing a cradle instead of a cot or letting the baby sleep in the bed with you.

After nine months, your baby has gotten used to being rocked around in the tummy. The cradle recreates the rocking movement. This makes it feel safe, natural and relaxing for your baby – just as it feels natural for you to comfort by rocking and carrying him or her in your arms.

At the same time, the rocking motion stimulates your baby's balance which is the grounds for their future motor skill development. The cradle therefore comes as a developing and more natural extension of the time in the belly than, for instance, the cot.

Baby wants to be put in the corner

Newborn babies should not have too much space around them because they are just getting used to being out in the big world instead of in mom's safe, but confined belly.

The cradle is good because you rarely have to adjust the sleeping area with, for instance, a bed crib bunker or similar. At the same time the slightly smaller size is practical when you have to find space for it in your bedroom. For your baby's own safety it is recommended that the baby sleep in the same room as you for the first three months.

More sleep for you

The time with a newborn is always tough both because you will not get as much sleep as usual but also because a new, little person, who has to be watched and cared for, has arrived. Some parents choose to let the baby sleep in their bed - which can be a solution as well - as long as you do not place the baby between you.

Lying in between you creates a greater risk of injury and authorities advise against it. Your baby will need as much space in your bed as in their own and it can be a challenge to fit three people in a bed meant for two without losing sleep.

The cradle makes sure the baby has their own space while still being right next to you. And when the cradle is right there, it is still very easy to comfort and breastfeed without really having to get out of bed.

Life of a cradle after the first six months

It is no secret that you have to buy a lot of stuff for the new arrival. That is also why it might seem over the top to buy a cradle which will only be used as a sleeping space for about six months before it gets too small.

Hoppekids want all of our furniture to be used – and reused – for a long time because it is far better for the environment if only few pieces of furniture have to be produced. That is why the cradle is made from solid wood which makes it sturdy and very durable. It can also be reshaped into a great little bench that your child can use for many years.

If a little brother or sister arrives, it can easily be made into a cradle again, and because it is so durable, it will last for generations.

The cradle has been designed so you can easily re-build it into a smart bench.

CHRISTIAN will have a long life because the top is easy to remove as soon as you don't need a changing station anymore.

THE CHANGING STATION

More than 5000! That is the amount of diapers, you can expect to change during your child's first 3 years. Most changes will hopefully happen on a well-equipped changing station. We will give you some pointers on how to pick the best solution for you and your child.

You have to consider a great many things when creating a changing station. Where should it be located and how much surplus space does that room have? Is it necessary to move the changing station out of the bathroom - and then how do you get access to water?

Placement

When choosing a changing station, you have to remember that it is a work station. A lot of people tend to focus mainly on the decorations and coziness of the situation, while forgetting the practical details.

The optimal placement of the changing station is next to a tap with running water. For that the bathroom is the obvious choice, but some choose the kitchen or the utility room if space is an issue.

Some place the changing station in the bedroom because it has space or because they want to keep all the baby items in one place. When you don't have access to running water, you can use a small wash bowl. Some bowls are divided into several spaces so you have water for both the 'head and the tail'. During the day – and especially during the night – you should keep lukewarm water in a thermos for easy access.

No matter where you place your changing station, it is important to keep necessities nearby. These include diapers, wash cloths, water, clean clothes, lotions, nail clippers and cotton swaps among others. They should be easy to reach so you don't have to leave the station during a change. If you need to turn away from the station, it is recommended to place your child on the floor or place a hand on the baby's belly so you know the baby is lying safely on the changing station. Also keep in mind that the station should have the correct height so you don't strain your back when using it.

Size of the furniture

Only few people have unlimited space in the children's room or bathroom. Luckily there are a number of solutions to this. If you have the station in a small bathroom, consider using a wall hanging changing station that can fold up when not in use. You can also choose a standing changing station that won't take up too much space but still contains everything you need.

If you have plenty of space, for instance in the child's room, you can choose a dresser with a dressing top. The dressing top transforms the dresser into a practical changing station and when your child no longer needs diapers, you can remove the dressing top. After that, the dresser can be used to store all sorts of things in the years to come.

Changing time is bonding time

Even though it rarely is downright lovely to handle a used diaper, the time you spend changing your child is a perfect opportunity to bond. It gives you the opportunity to talk to your child and share a lot of important eye and physical contact. This makes your child grow accustomed to you and to the process of changing diapers.

When your child grows – and grows restless – you might want to consider having a toy nearby for entertainment. However, the changing station should be kept fairly neat so neither you nor your child's attention on this quality time goes out the window.

CHECKLIST FOR THE CHANGING STATION

A SAFER BASE

- a guide to a healthier children's room

Children use far more time in their rooms than adults do in any other room of the house. This is why it is even more important to make sure that it is not unhealthy for them to play and sleep in their rooms. Some things you will have to consider before you furnish. Other things need to be considered when choosing or buying items and toys. And then there are things you will need to do every day. There can be consequences by not doing anything, but luckily doing small things make a big difference as long as you know where to make an effort. In this guide, we focus on some of the things you should remember when you shop for, furnish, decorate and maintain a healthy children's room.

Sources: The Ecological Council and other

BEFORE ANYONE MOVES IN - PREPERATION WILL GET YOU FAR

Paint

When choosing paint, you should buy water-based paint, preferably with ecolabels such as the Nordic Ecolabel or the EU Ecolabel. These are better for the indoor climate and for nature than other types of paints. You also need to ventilate the room for at least a week before anyone moves in because the paint gives off more substances to the air while hardening.

Decorating and furnishing

Again, look for the Nordic or EU Ecolabels because they ensure that you buy furniture with a minimum of harmful chemicals, but also because you get more secure and durable furniture. Consider whether you need carpets and curtains because they generally give off more dust. Alternatively use blinds or look for allergy friendly carpets.

Safety

Remember to always consider safety when furnishing, and generally only buy EU-safety approved furniture. Also, furniture that can fall over should be fastened to the walls with fittings. Shelf brackets should be of the sturdy kind that can handle both the weight of boxes full of toys as well as detouring child mountaineers.

FILLING THE BOXES AND DRAWERS – STORAGE AND DECORATION

Dust in the room

As you know, textiles give off dust. The more blankets, curtains, clothing and bedding you have laying around, the more dust you will have. Toys and items also easily collect dust. You should therefore consider reducing the number of items you have lying about e.g. by using closed storage for everything that can collect or give off dust. That way you have made cleaning easier as well.

You can also choose to use textiles labelled Oeko-Tex® which is the most widespread health label concerning textiles in the world.

Toys

You should be concerned and aware whether your child's toys contain phthalates. Long term exposure to phthalates is known for hormone disruption. This can also happen through toys containing PVC which among others is typically found in soft plastic products. Hormone disruption can lead to fertility problems, obesity, diabetes 2, behavioral problems and an increased risk of hormone related forms of cancer among others. Also try to avoid especially phosphor based and brominated flame retardants that can typically be found in foam products and electronics. These substances can have the same hormone disrupting effects.

Decorative plants

Plants are generally great at purifying both CO2 and particles from the air. Dirt, children and small grabby hands is not a great combo though. Therefore, choose plants that can hang outside of your child's reach. Ferns and Aloe Vera are particularly good but air plants are great as well because they need minimal care.

EVERYDAY LIFE - THE SMALL THINGS MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Something in the air...

When you breathe, you exhale CO₂. A high concentration of CO₂ in a room during the night can result in an unrestful sleep, low power of concentration the next day and trouble learning. Luckily, it can be helped by three daily ventilations of the room - the most important time being right before going to sleep.

Damp surroundings

The above-mentioned ventilation is an easy way to rid yourselves of a damp indoor climate as well. Too much moisture in the air can result in mold which is why you should keep the doors closed to damp rooms such as the bathroom and basement.

The effects on the indoor climate do not only come from the room itself. Cooking and smoke from candles give off particles that are considered as potentially harmful as the particles from car exhaust. Use a powerful cooker hood during cooking and replace candles with LED-alternatives. A ventilation system helps but cannot replace manual ventilation completely.

The good ol' solution

Thorough cleaning definitely helps as well. Dusting and vacuuming helps to get rid of particles and chemicals that bind themselves to dust. You should also be mindful of which cleaning agents you use in the house. Products with the Nordic Ecolabel or the EU Ecolabel are generally better for everyone's health.

Furniture on wheels gives you a flexible and easy to clean room.

ROOM FOR BIG DREAMS

- with movable furniture and clever solutions

A children's room has to accommodate a large span of activities. Some days, your child wants to read quietly in the bed or do homework at the desk. Other days, the room is full of energy and what feels like all of the toys will be spread out on the floor. This calls for a room with flexible solutions – especially in rooms where floor space is sparse.

Furniture on wheels gives you flexibility

Furniture on wheels makes it easy to re-organize the layout of the room, for instance, to create more floor space. The JONAS desk and the bookshelf on wheels both fit perfectly under the halfhigh bed.

The lockable wheels enable bigger children to move the furniture on their own while ensuring that the furniture stands perfectly still when the wheels are locked. It also helps you maintain a healthier in-door climate in the room because the furniture can be moved out of the way so the vacuum cleaner can reach the corners.

The flexible furniture makes it easy for you to have multiple functions in the same space. When the bookshelf on wheels is placed under the bed there is still room for a small cave behind it. The top of the bookshelf is the perfect height for a playing table while the desk can work as a night stand for the bed.

THE NORDIC ECOLABEL

The Nordic Ecolabel is a label which makes it easy for you to choose the best products for the environment. The label makes sure that the product meets strict standards regarding environment, health, quality and safety.

The Nordic Ecolabel is a widely known label in the Nordic countries and is similar to the EU Ecolabel. It is used on non-food products such as washing powder, lotions, toilet paper and furniture. But what does it mean to have the Nordic Ecolabel on your products and how does it impact you and your children's everyday life?

The Nordic Ecolabel equals strict standards

The Nordic Ecolabel guarantees that the entirety of the product's journey – from raw material to production, use, disposal and recirculation – is factored in when the standards of the labelled products are set. Among others the products live up to strict chemical standards which is great for you and your children's health as well as for the people producing the products and for the environment.

The standards are constantly updated and tightened, so you are always sure that the Nordic Ecolabeled products are environmentally sustainable, and a great choice for environment and health.

For instance, the wood used in Nordic Ecolabeled furniture has to come from evidently legally cut down trees, and the origin of the wood has to be traceable. A great share of the wood also has to come from certified sustainable forestry. The furniture also cannot contain chemicals such as phthalates, heavy metals, flame retardants or fluorinated substances which can function as endocrine disruptors.

Furthermore, the glue and paint used cannot contain anything cancer-causing, and there are strict standards regarding the evaporation of surface treatment products as well.

The Nordic Ecolabel also has strict standards regarding furniture durability because the environmental impact mainly happens during production. The longer the furniture lasts, the fewer pieces of furniture will need to be produced.

That is why the Nordic Ecolabel is seen as a strong seal of approval concerning quality, durability and recyclability.

What does it mean for you and your children?

To have the Nordic Ecolabel on your furniture means that you help sustain the forests of the world. It means that you take responsibility and consider which chemicals you want to keep out of your home - and out of nature. It means you want to save the few resources we have left.

It means that you can feel safe that the furniture has been responsibly produced with the future of your children and the environment in mind.

The Nordic Ecolabel also means that you do not have to worry about your children's health when they move around on, near and in the furniture. Since they will not give off any harmful substances it is quite alright to have a little taste. But we must warn you: The taste is rather bland.

Especially children's furniture has to be able to take a beating and by choosing furniture with the Nordic Ecolabel, you are certain to get very tough and durable furniture which can withstand the treatment only children can provide.

In other words, the Nordic Ecolabel guarantees you long-lasting quality and attention to the environment, to you, to your children and to the future.

This article was written in collaboration with Ecolabeling Denmark.

”Pieces of furniture marked with the Nordic Ecolabel live up to strict standards regarding environment, health and quality. The furniture has been strength, safety and stability tested by international test standards. This means that you get a piece of long-lasting furniture which is safe for your child to sleep and play in. It also means that your child will not come in contact with undesirable chemicals through breathing or close contact with the piece of furniture”

GOOD THINGS IN SMALL PACKAGES

- a guide for the small children's room

A small children's room can easily be a big challenge which takes planning to solve. But if you use the right solutions, it is far from impossible. We have gathered a bunch of thoughts, you can consider if you have ahead of you the challenge of decorating and furnishing a great children's room on a limited amount of square meters.

Your child does not come in a standard size

No matter the size, the children's room should be furnished so it fits your child. A desk is no good if your child would rather play on the tablet or run around the house dressed as a princess. Nobody knows your child like you, and your child of course, and you both know which toy is the favorite and how the time is best spent.

Especially in small children's rooms, you can't just use whichever piece of furniture you want if there is even a chance it won't be used. You have to be economical about the space and settle for only the things that bring joy to your child.

“Does he play with trains and a race track? Then I would never invest in wall closets and boxes for small things. Then I would choose big, fat floor boxes with wheels that can be moved and contain all the huge parts for the race and train tracks”

- Sine Grenaa, mother of 2, interior designer

The overlooked space

In especially small rooms, it is easier to find additional space in the topmost part of the room than in the lower one. You should include this space in the furnishing to use the entirety of the room which is important when space is an issue. Shelves and hanging bookcases are ideal for storage in height and the top of a tall closet can be used for storing things you don't use that often.

“The key to creating room and space is getting floor space. So get everything up, up on the walls. Get some shelves on those walls and get the mess off the floor”

– Annemette Voss, mother of 3, architect

At the same time, halfhigh, midhigh and high beds are great solutions for using the overlooked space. They stand tall and create room beneath themselves which can easily be made into hideouts, storage space, floor space or where you can put a desk if your child needs that.

Quality over quantity

If you furnish with multifunctional furniture, you get more functions in less space. There is a number of ways to do it which can be either built-in function or a 'normal' piece of furniture made into a multifunctional piece of furniture. For instance it can be a bed which is also a sofa and a playground, or a bed which also has storage space.

If you decide to build something yourselves, it can save space and create more functions in less space as well. It can be a staircase to the bed made from book cases, a bed placed on top of two dressers or something else entirely. Let your imagination run wild!

However we will strongly encourage you to consider the safety of your child when both building furniture and in general.

Read the article in its full length on our website www.hoppekids.com and learn more about safety standards, storage, large vs. small pieces of furniture, colors and sloping walls.

Top 5 advice for decorating a small room

1. Use multifunctional pieces of furniture. They save a lot of space because you get more functions out of them.
2. Spend time finding the right storage solutions. Mess in a small room can make it seem even smaller.
3. Use the height of the room for storage or tall beds to create more floor space to play on.
4. Paint the walls of the room in bright colors that can open up a small room.
5. Furnish and decorate the room so it fits YOUR child and get rid of everything your child won't use.

s-P-e-l-l-i-N-g

- with Alphabet

A is for Academic Alphabet. B is for Bright Bumblebee. C is for Calculating Child. With the Alphabet universe your miniature Rowling can learn to s-p-e-l-l through her dreams. The perfect paradise of pillows puts the panache in your petal's proud play with letter picking. And you will never have any doubts about who sleeps where when it is written in cotton right on the bed.

The pillows from the Alphabet-universe are available in two sizes: 50x50 cm and 25x50 cm and in colours light blue and baby pink. Use the many letters and symbols available or mix and match with other pillows. Make the room extra personal by using your child's name as inspiration.

COZINESS IN THE HEIGHTS

- about the halfhigh and midhigh beds

When children see a half or midhigh bed, they do not just see a piece of furniture. Instead, they see a hideout, a space ship, a fairytale world or a playground. They get a great feeling of independence by having to climb to bed and can use the bed – or the space beneath it – as a personal space when they need a break.

The half and midhigh beds are great for small bedrooms where extra space is often needed and can more easily be found in the topmost part of the room. A bed raised off the floor gives more floor space and the space beneath the bed can be fitted with one of our many universe curtains which transform it into a fantastical hideout. Here, your child can relax or be read to in magical surroundings.

Does the height of the bed concern you?

Some parents wonder whether the height might cause problems for their child and for the practical activities in everyday life. They have concerns whether their child might fall out of the bed or if it might get difficult to change the bedding. Many parents – especially the ones who are vertically challenged – solve the problem by having a small step ladder or stool for practical purposes.

But is your child really safe in that tall bed? The guard rails of Hoppekids beds are very durable because they are attached firmly to the beds. This means that the rail will guard even an unruly sleeper and it supports your child when he or she climbs in and out of the bed.

A half or midhigh bed gives you the best of both worlds because the height allows for playtime or a hideout under the bed but the bed is still low enough for you, the parents, to reach into.

When children have to climb to bed it can give them a sense of independence and help develop their motor skills.

The child grows... and the bed does too!

Do you think the bed might be too tall for your child at the moment? Then you can just save the half or midhigh-module for when your child is ready for it. Both the half and the midhigh beds come in divisible versions which means that you can change the height of the beds to correspond to your child's – and your – changing needs. If your child gets bored with the half or midhigh bed, you can just remove the module again.

Somewhere between high and low

The differences between the midhigh and the halfhigh beds are that the midhigh is a little bit taller than the halfhigh. Other than that, the midhigh only comes in a 90x200 cm-version.

The extra height actually makes a big difference. Especially for older children, the few extra centimeters might be the difference between whether the space beneath the bed is a hideout or an extra room in the room. By using the midhigh module, you get space for furniture like a desk or a children's set of chairs and a table. This gives you better options for furnishing and for using your imagination beneath the bed.

Create a cozy cave-like atmosphere under the mid- or halfhigh bed by hanging a curtain in front of it. Decorate with fairy lights, a mattress, pillows and pictures. Perfect for goodnight stories and other cozy cave activities.

HIGH CEILINGS

- with Forest

Can you sense the tranquility? The hedgehog is pottering around inside a pile of leaves and the trees stand around you, tall, green and majestic. Welcome to the Forest universe. Between the leaves atop a dresser sits a wise owl and observes the scene before him. The forest floor is soft and mossy and two children are playing with their teddies in a grove. Everything is at peace here amongst the flowers and leaves.

INFINITY AND BED-YOND

- with Space

The bed is a rocket ship, a foreign planet or a space station, and the room is the infinite universe with stars, black holes and remote galaxies. The destination is unknown but we know the journey goes through both meteor belts and solar systems where hanging onto the rail is crucial! Luckily there is plenty of solid ground inside the children's room but the imagination can easily take off with the universe Space.

GUIDE: CHOOSE THE RIGHT BED

Since you are reading these pages we assume that you, like many others, are searching inspiration on the multitude of possibilities there are available when it comes to children's beds. Or perhaps you are just uncertain if you have already found the right bed?

This guide will take you through what we believe are the most important things to consider when choosing a bed.

Enjoy – and should you need more information, all of our retailers are more than happy to help you out!

Find even more inspiration and a retailer close to you on www.hoppekids.com

SIZE DOES MATTER

A great place to start is to decide what mattress size you would like in your new bed. The two most common sizes are 70x160 cm and 90x200 cm.

Size 70x160 cm is a great little size. The change from a crib to a junior bed can be somewhat insecure for some children, because they are not used to having so much space in the bed. It is also an excellent size for smaller rooms because it does not take up much floor space. The bed is large enough for an average sized 8-year-old. By then it is time to decorate the room for a pre-teen anyway.

Size 90x200 cm is great because your child will have lots of room to grow while also allowing you to lie down comfortably next to your child. If you are considering changing the bed to a high bed or bunk bed in the future, 90x200 cm is the size for you as it will leave you with the best options for rebuilding.

All beds from Hoppekids have been tested support up to 100 kg.

Here you can see how a BASIC halfhigh bed looks in size 90x200 (above) and 70x160 (below). Both beds are 105 cm tall.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO CHANGE YOUR MIND?

The modular bed system enables you to rebuild the bed – you can always change your mind!

This questions might be difficult to answer because who can tell the future? We cannot, but our experience tells us that if you are thinking about rebuilding the bed to e.g. a halfhigh, bunk bed, high bed or other models it will be worth your while to choose a series or model that support this from the beginning.

Modular bed systems are cleverly designed for the modules to be exchanged or removed without you having to exchange the entire bed. Not only is it easy for you to change your mind, but it is also sustainable because most of the resources are spend producing the 'sleeping area' on a bed rather than e.g. the high legs.

Hoppekids's BASIC collection offers a good selection of standard possibilities while the PREMIUM collection offers an almost infinite number of beds, extensions and accessories.

Read more about the difference between PREMIUM and BASIC on page 44 and on www.hoppekids.com

WHAT TYPE IS YOUR CHILD?

It can be a difficult task to choose a bed. To help you, we have described different types of children and our suggestion for their perfect bed.

For the grounded

If your child feels most comfortable near the ground the perfect choice would be a junior bed. There might not be a lot of room under the bed but you can fit either some spacious drawers or a pull-out bed. Besides, you can always purchase a heightening module for the bed if your child suddenly feels like climbing.

For the cave dweller

Is the dream scenario to play hide-and-seek, build pillow forts and snuggle up? Then we suggest a halfhigh, midhigh or bunk bed. If you add a curtain and place a mattress on the floor below the bed you will always know where Junior is: in the bed-cave, possibly planning to steal cookies or reading fairytales for the teddies.

For those who share and have guests

For shared rooms and for children who often have overnight guests the optimal choice would be a solution with two or more sleeping places in the same space as one. For instance, a bunk bed with a pull-out bed gives you three sleeping places without taking up extra room. A high bed with furniture below create a small 'living room' by day and with our lounge-module you can transform the 'sofa' to a guest bed. You can find our guide on decorating a shared room on page 56.

For those with a high ceiling

If you are lucky to have a high ceiling, and are comfortable with your child crawling into bed, we suggest looking into our higher beds because they add valuable floor space to the room.

The space under the bed can instead be used for storage, work space, a cozy cave or 'just' extra floor space for the race cars and princess castles.

Another clever way to free up floor space is to invest in storage with a good height or solid shelves.

For those without much room

It requires a super parent to decorate a small bedroom. In a small room you have to be extra careful in your choice in furniture - and especially beds – because they quickly take up most of the space.

We recommend a bed with a small mattress size which takes up less floor space or that you choose a higher bed which will give you extra space under the bed. For an added effect you can choose a bed with both a small mattress size AND height!

You can read our guide on recoringating small bedrooms on page 26.

SO UHM...DOES IT HAVE ANY ACCESSORIES?

You probably won't find a bed with built-in air condition or ice-cream maker, but our extensive list of accessories will help you modify the bed to fit your needs.

Both of our collections - BASIC and PREMIUM - has a large number of security rails – both removable and fastened. We offer slides for halfhigh beds as well as storage solutions and pull-out beds for the junior and bunk bed. The PREMIUM collection also has slanted ladders and handles to make the climb to bed even safer.

TIP!

If you want a specific piece of accessory it can be an easy way of excluding certain beds and thereby make your choice easier.

IF YOU WANT TO ADD THAT EXTRA OOMPH!

Most go for a bed in neutral colors when buying a bed because it makes (re)decoration much easier. For others, however, a colorful bed is the number one dream. If your child dreams of a colorful bed we suggest that you look into the My Color collection on page 30. If you choose a colorful bed it could be a good idea to use neutral colors on the walls and other furniture as that can create a neat balance in the room.

Another way of adding personality and atmosphere to a room is by decorating with pillows and textiles. The great thing about textiles is that they make it easy to change the style of a room. It also means that parts of a room can work great as a hand-me-down to a smaller sibling.

Our textile universes are hand sewn and includes many different elements such as cute curtains, fun bean bags and soft pillows.

THEME: STORAGE

Space for storage is alfa and omega in a children's room. It keeps the dust in or out, gives you floor space and an overview but most importantly, it helps you keep the room tidy! Storage come in many forms, shapes and heights which is why you will be able to get everything stored just right for your children's rooms.

Warding your robes

The wardrobe is a storage classic. It is available in practical and cleverly designed two- or three- door version. The depth of 65 cm gives plenty of room to store clothes, toys and anything else you would like to store behind closed doors. Both versions come with a hanger rail, spacious drawers and deep, wide shelves and you can purchase extra shelves if needed.

CHRISTIAN dresser

The timeless, smart CHRISTIAN with four large drawers gives you many possibilities for storage. CHRISTIAN can have a long life, because you can use it both as a dresser and as a changing station. The removable top makes it easy to decorate a “big child’s room” when your child stop using diapers and the content of the drawers will be replaced with clothes and toys.

HANS wardrobe

The HANS wardrobe stands tall at 169 cm but the space is well used with three broad shelves and two large drawers. You can use HANS with a curtain (see picture below), two lovely doors or as a bookshelf.

PETER and MARIE bookshelves

The children's set MATHILDE

PETER and MARIE are rather similar. PETER is deeper and wider than MARIE but that also means you can store more stuff in it. The size of MARIE is particularly good for small rooms or perhaps behind a door. They are both only 129 cm tall which means that their three shelves will always meet your children at eye level.

Because of the clever construction the children's set MATHILDE is robust yet easy to move. There is perfect storage for things like toys, plastic balls and similar inside the bench. The bench has rounded off notch handles and soft close that makes it harder for fingers to get caught when closing the lid. You can decorate MATHILDE with cushions available in many different colors. This ensures both comfort and coziness!

A shelf unit with options

If you want a versatile piece of furniture for storage and playtime then the shelf unit is perfect. It can skate around using its wheels or it can stay perfectly still when the wheels are locked. It has plenty of storage space and the top surface is large enough to use as a playing table.

The question is: What would you like to use it for?

The (treasure) chest

Where do you hide your child treasures? In your toy chest, of course! The chest is pretty (and) practical and can easily contain piles of toy treasures. Because of its wheels, it can easily be moved around which is practical if you have to redecorate the room. The chest also has rounded off notch handles and soft close that makes it harder for fingers to get caught when the lid is closing.

1+1 CAN EQUAL 3

- a guide to a great shared children's room

There can be many reasons for having a shared children's room in your home.

Perhaps you want a room for playtime and another for sleeping in. Maybe a shared room is necessary because you need space. Sometimes the children just don't want to sleep alone and at other times the shared room is a great way to teach the children some valuable life skills.

We have gathered a bunch of considerations that can help you if you are about to put two children in one room or are considering it.

"I like that they're learning to take responsibility for each other's and our common things"

- Annette Voss, mother of 3

One times two or two times one?

The first you should consider is who you are furnishing and decorating for. Is it two social dress-up whippersnappers or an introvert tech geek and an outgoing adventurer? The room has to be able to hold two – perhaps different – personalities.

You should take a look at your children and what individual and common needs they have and furnish the room with that in mind. The distribution of space doesn't necessarily have to be equal – though still fair – if for instance one child would rather play in your living room anyway.

Efficient furniture

If space is an issue, it is necessary to furnish efficiently and make use of every bit of space in the room. Efficient furnishing can be using multifunctional pieces of furniture which for instance is a bench with storage in it. It can also be by using foldable furniture or pieces of furniture that can be hid away so you get that valuable floor space for playtime when you need it.

Top 5 advice decorating a shared room

1. Consider the children's personal needs when you furnish. Often, you don't have room for unnecessary pieces of furniture
2. Create spaces in the room where the children can be by themselves but also spaces where they can be social
3. A clear division of toys or the room will give you fewer misunderstandings concerning ownership.
4. Decide whether the children's clothes or toys can be stored in another room.
5. Try the shared room for a period of time even though you don't have to. It might be great!

Beds can also be space efficient which is practical when you need two of them. You can do this by choosing halfhigh, high or bunk beds with space beneath the top bunk for either playtime or a sibling. Junior beds are also an option with their slightly smaller measurements being 70x160 cm. They can give you more floor space than a regular sized bed, and can also be found in different taller versions.

Efficient furnishing is also about vertical storage. Shelves, bookcases and room dividers are great at making use of the topmost space for the essential storage of toys or other important items.

If you read our article "Good things come in small packages" on page 26 concerning furnishing a small children's room, you can get great tips on making use of a room's every centimeter.

An advantageous room

Having a shared room is not just a long series of challenges and battles. There are a lot of advantages having your brother or sister close at hand.

First and foremost, a large room can feel even larger when you yourself are a bit small and especially smaller children can find comfort in having a sibling sleeping in the same room. With a little practice, the children can learn to sleep even though another person is moving around or if there is light in the room. This is very handy later in life. And you almost always have a playmate nearby!

Having a shared room, your children also have a head start in learning to compromise and sharing their stuff. Because when you share a room, you have to be able to share your things and learn that you can't always get your way.

"It contributes to strengthening the bond between siblings, and they become good at sharing their toys and perhaps even better at playing together"

- Sine Grenaa, mother of 2

Getting speed is easier outside and mom and dad raise their eyebrows when you use the sofa ramp anyway.

IT'S ALL ABOUT THE CHILDREN

Hoppekids is a universe for the children. Everything we do is about them and all of our activities have the shared goal of making the world a better place for them. The children are the reason we create high quality furniture, focus on sustainability and provide a helping hand for children all over the world. What is the point of supporting the children if we do not leave a healthy world for them to live in?

Because it is all about the children, it is automatically also about the world we hand over to them. However, furniture alone cannot save the world. We need more helping hands to create ripples in the surface.

Where to start?

If we want to change the world, we have to start with ourselves. That is why we have worked on optimizing our company and our products. By producing FSC®-certified and Nordic Ecolabeled furniture and textiles from Oeko-Tex® certified piece goods we make a difference in safety and health in the children's room. Through the furniture we support the environment and sustainability in the world where our children are growing up.

We consider a healthy organization as a fundament of being able to help. Every day we work on creating an economic foundation which enables us to create real change through continued support.

It's about getting involved

As a company we help through economical support. However, it is our philosophy that it is incredibly useful to help those who help the children. Therefore we work with several projects and initiatives that has a focus on creating a lasting difference for the people who fight for children firsthand.

"I want to reach a place where our support works as a lever for other people's ideas and commitment and motivate more to help"

René Stenvang, founder of Hoppekids

We support several local football clubs in Denmark because they are a fantastic symbol on all the volunteers in the world who put a lot of energy and time in helping. Not just helping the local communities, but also helping the children and those who have a difficult life. At Hammerum Special Olympics is the weekly exercise and the volunteer's efforts helping their disabled players to create a better, healthier life with more friendships. The self-esteem is boosted because the team allow for anyone to participate regardless of skill level. Consequently, this also means that bullying is virtually as non-existing.

”It motivates when you can see the passion in the eyes of those who create a real difference first hand. Feel their gratitude for helping them. This boosts their motivation and power to do even more”

René Stenvang, founder of Hoppekids

As with the football clubs, we believe that the many international relief organizations are amazing at creating ripples in the surface and as a result making the world a better place. Besides Save the Children we have also fallen completely for DINNødhjælp and their founder Anja Lovén's work for the witch children in Nigeria. For DINNødhjælp it is not just about operating a life-saving orphanage for exposed children. They are determined to support, enlighten and change the society and, ultimately, the culture which create the tale of these witch children. They are changing the world for the better.

We are sustainable together

It is our hope that our help, support and sustainable initiatives create ripples in the surface and inspire people to do the same – regardless of how much or how little you are able to do. We are strongest if we stand together to help and support each other with carrying the load.

” We can all contribute a little in our day to day life. It is the sum of all the small things which really creates a difference”

René Stenvang, founder of Hoppekids

We believe that the big changes in sustainability come from a multitude of small changes in our day to day life. By changing the small things and helping where you can. Because if everyone of us make a small contribution whenever we can, find the passion in ourselves and give more than we take then we collaborate on making the future even better – for us and our children.
